Spring 2014 Student Positions

If you are interested in global issues and want to gain course credit and experience, then you might consider applying for an internship or fellowship at GP. The office is offering eight paid fellowship positions and several internship positions for the spring semester. Students from any major can apply; some fellowships even accept applications from other educational institutions. In addition to research and office assistance, interns and fellows help to facilitate the multiple public events that GP organizes each semester. Every fellowship program awards $500 for the semester with the exception of the Lawrence J. Chastang Global Fellowship, which provides $1,000.

Internships require an applicant to have a minimum 3.0 GPA, to be at least a Junior and to submit an application and resume by December 13, 2013. Applicants for fellowships must also be a Junior or higher and submit a resume and application, but must also have a minimum 3.5 GPA, two letters of reference, a one-page personal statement, a 5-10 page writing sample and an unofficial transcript. Interns and fellows are expected to have a weekly time commitment of approximately 12 to 15 hours, with 10 hours dedicated to time in the office. To apply, or for more information, students can go to the GP website or contact the Intern Supervisor, Jocelyn Figueroa. "We at the office are excited to welcome new fellows and interns for the spring semester. We look forward to your applications," says Figueroa.

panels were book-ended by two keynote speakers who tackled the difficulties of formulating policy in the Middle East at home, and implementing it abroad. Three of our student fellows, Lucien Charland, Christine Comfort and William George, provide more details about the event in their written reviews of the panels and keynotes. Those can be found under the event's page on our website, or by following this link.
